SHAMING IS UNHELPFUL

Katherine, creator of the Friendly Anarchism podcast, advocates "shaming people for their fascist beliefs" in the Oct. 19 EW cover story, "Antifa."

Publicly shaming those who engage in hateful acts and live by hateful ideologies does precisely nothing to convert ignorance and hatred into understanding and trust. Only real human connection does that.

If the annihilation of fascism and violence against oppressed populations is the goal, the catharsis of the fight against fascist individuals should be irrelevant. Shame the fascist tool, not the person who wields it. There is no "them," no "other." There is only the spectrum of ways in which we humans wrestle with our fears and our egos, some much more violently than others.

It takes more courage to listen to a fascist than it does to fight one. Only then will you have the opportunity to share the evidence of their beliefs' destructive consequences, and only then will the people you claim to protect be safe.

FIGHTING STUDENT DEBT

As a student dealing with increasingly high textbook prices, I wanted to show my appreciation for Max Thornberry and his article "Pay to Play" (Oct. 12) highlighting the situation we are facing today. It is an important and often neglected component of the unreasonable debt that is being placed upon students today.

I also wanted to express my delight that you highlighted Open Educational Resources at Lane Community College. I firmly believe that open textbooks are an integral part of the solution.

Access codes are a particularly nefarious development. I have started working with OSPIRG, a student political group with a presence both at LCC and UO, as getting textbooks cheaper and stopping the use of access codes is one of their top issues.

I would like to encourage my fellow students to get involved, even if that just means letting your professors know that you are bothered by high prices and access code use.

KISSING TRUMP'S RUMP

Apropos "Right Wing Horrors" (EW Oct. 26), the two words that most aptly describe the time we live in are "frightening" and "dispiriting."

And Halloween has nothing to do with it!

While he was still just a candidate running for President, Donald Trump once famously boasted that he could "walk down [New York City's] Fifth Avenue, shoot someone," and walk away with impunity (thereby demonstrating both an arrogant disregard of our laws and a callow lack of concern for his fellow human beings).

As reported in The New York Times last week, Trump boasted again after being accorded a "standing ovation" by timorous and self-serving Congressional Republicans, many of whom had expressed dissatisfaction with the resident privately but cravenly kowtowed to him when he appeared before them in what he later characterized as a "love fest".

It's easy to imagine the leader of the free world pulling off another stunt in full view of the public that he could later boast about:

If Donald J. Trump
bent over and pulled down his pants baring his rump right smack on the Lincoln Mall, it'd shock hardly anyone at all.
But of course diehard Congressional Trumpists
would trip all over themselves vying for a chance to be first in line to kiss it.
You wouldn't want to miss it!

Adam Horvath

CONTRA SCABS

Standing in support with AFSCME workers at the picket line, there was some discussion about why "scabs" turn their backs on their fellow workers who make a sacrifice for themselves and the larger group. Some people who enjoy benefits earned by unions throughout labor's history turn away from their fellows, indicating to management and anyone else that they are "good little slaves."

The word "slave" may be too strong, as slaves got nothing but bare sustenance for harder work than even today; however when comparing the ratio between the raises middle management acquired (19 percent) to those of lower paid employees (2 percent), it is no exaggeration to say that this disparity is a lot less than fair. This is made truer when considering the inequality present to begin with.

Some "strikebreakers" say they cross the picket lines because "they need the money" but add, not noticing the contradiction, that their pay and benefits, even vacation time, are "quite good." If their pay is so good, why can't they spare a bit of it in the interest of fairness in a system where hard work is supposed to be valued and rewarded whatever your station in life is?

The ideal of communism (or presently, socialism) is that everybody earns comparable amounts — "from each according to their ability, to each according to their need" (Karl Marx). The aspirations and desires of all fair and good Americans are not far from this. Everyone should be able to earn a decent living in the U.S.

A MODEST PROPOSAL

Here is what I figure is the increase in homeless shelters this winter from last winter, including decisions made by the Eugene City Council on Oct. 23: Dusk to Dawn tents, St. Vincent de Paul, from November to March: 20 more; Nightingale rest stop: 6; Emerald Village: 22. Total new: 48.

Compared to the need, we are not getting anywhere. The homeless advocate shelter creation strategy has failed.

Fortunately there is hope. At a recent City Council public forum, a woman who lives by Monroe Park talked about the "thugs" who inhabit the park, using drugs, bad language, fighting. They scare her so much she is thinking of moving.

Councilor Greg Evans spoke of similar problems at a park near where he lives, which he said are the worst he has seen in the over 30 years he's lived in Eugene.

This is great. The profoundly alienated surplus people that middle-class society literally has no use for can drive the middle-classes out of their homes, lower property values, de-gentrify neighborhoods and make houses available to be subdivided into cheap apartments.

In the absence of any coherent militant leadership among the advocates, the "thugs" will lead the way. When creation fails, it's time for destruction.

BAD BONDS

An apology: In the recent voters' pamphlet, I opposed the bond measure "Bonds to Fix Streets and Fund Bicycle and Pedestrian Projects." I did so on the grounds that the 9-1 spending on paving streets to alternative transportation infrastructure was not enough. It isn't. But I went on to say, "This isn't the right bond for Eugene." And for that I apologize.

Aquila Tax-Free Trust of Oregon, a New York group that manages Oregon Municipal Bonds, identify the Oregon Municipal Bond Investor as "Oregon taxpayers who can benefit from income that is exempt from federal and state income taxes."

The logic is this: Lacking tax money for basic services, the city taxes us to buy a bond that will provide tax-free income to the richest Oregonians?

Outcomes aside, any bond measure impoverishes the community. The $3.8-trillion bond market uses local governments to funnel money upward to the very people who then (Citizens United v. FEC) control our government from the top down. That is oligarchy, not democracy.

I want separated bicycle lanes, but I cannot support any bond measure. The other day, at the City Club of Eugene, I asked myself, "Who am I? Why am I here?" That was a difficult question.

I realized afterward that maybe we should all ask ourselves the same question. "Who are we? Why are we here?" Try not to leap to an answer. Sit with it. Then look at this bond measure again.

Otis Haschemeyer
Eugene

THE BOND SCAM

The question on the ballot in Measure 20-275 is not whether we should fix our streets, but whether we should buy a bond to do so.

I don't support the bond measure for several reasons. A relatively peevish one: I resent the city hiring California strategists (the Strategy Research Institute) to tell them how to message the bond measure such that it might pass. The strategists were clear: Passage would require city agents (some official, some not) aggressively promoting the bond.

We've seen the city insiders coming out in letters, talks on social media. I find the overlap of scripted terms — "necessary," "successful," "accountability," "responsibility" — and threats of a dark future, such as "if allowed to sunset, streets will begin to deteriorate, immediately!" All too Matrix-y.

But, again, the measure is not about whether we should fix our streets. It is about whether we should buy a bond to do so. The bond market is a trillion dollar industry profiting the top-half of the wealthy one percent.

Local governments can stop buying bonds. The money comes from us. It can stay with us. No need to pay what would in this case be $2.5 million-plus to billionaires like Uncle Phil.

It's okay, everyone. We can find another way. The city will find another way. No need to be taking our dollars and giving them to the top. There are many dire things in the world, but this is not one of them.

A grassroots group of citizens and land use advocates continues to fight a quarry planned for a butte just on the edges of Oakridge. Save TV Butte is up against Ed King of King Estate Winery, who is an investor in the Old Hazeldell Quarry project.

Save TV Butte and one of its members, Kathy Pokorny, have filed a petition for review with Oregon's Land Use Board of Appeals.

The group says its petition is a "legal challenge to Lane County's rubber-stamp approval of the dangerous, disfiguring gravel strip-mine."

While opposition to the Old Hazeldell Quarry stems from environmental and livability concerns, the LUBA case itself addresses what mine opponent Kevin Matthews calls a "complicated multipart land-use decision involving rezoning the land and several things changing at once," such as changing Lane County's Rural Comprehensive Plan (RCP) and adding the mine to the natural resources inventory.

Pokorny, a retiree, is new to battles such as this. "I've always been involved in community activities and community groups, but this is the first time I've ever stepped forward and tried to lead the charge," she says.

The butte, she says, is "right here in our front yard," and she's concerned about the health aspects both personally and for the people of Oakridge. "In our research we discovered that silica dust is right close to asbestos as far as health risks." The silica comes from the blasting and grinding of andesite rock in the quarry, Pokorny says.

Old Hazeldell spokesman Phil Donavan says, "There were no surprises in the appeal. The Lane [County] Board of Commissioners generally rejected these same arguments based on their staff analysis and the evidence available."

He continues, "We're confident LUBA will rule before Christmas, and we can get to work creating jobs in and around Oakridge."

The quarry's website says it seeks to be a good neighbor, and the quarry proponents designed the location so that "... we do not impact water or air quality." The website goes on, "We will create a screen using natural rock and trees from preparing the site."

In March the Lane County Commission approved the changes to the county's RCP, adding the Hazeldell site

BUTTE DISPUTE APPEAL

*Opponents continue to fight to the Lane County Inventory of Significant Mineral and Aggregate Sites. The vote also authorized mining and processing and amended the RCP to re-designate land from forest to natural resource mineral, and rezoned that land from non-impacted forestland and impacted forestland to quarry and mine operations.

In other words, TV Butte moved from being forestland to being zoned for a hard rock quarry — a place where "big rocks," as the mine says on its website FAQ, "are turned into smaller ones."

Mining and natural resources fall under Oregon's Statewide Planning Goals and Guidelines.

Goal 5 of those planning goals covers more than a dozen resources, including wildlife habitats, historic places and aggregate, aka gravel, according to the Oregon Department of Land Conservation and Development. The goal lumps together natural resources to be preserved, such as waterways and wildlife habitats, with natural resources to be exploited, such as gravel.

Matthews, a land use advocate and Lane County Commission candidate, has been assisting Save TV Butte in its efforts. He says that while the group's concerns stem from increased traffic, effects on wildlife, "obvious landslide risks" and potential damage to local streams as well as a history of use of the area by local Native American tribes, the LUBA case centers on the regulatory process.

There is an "underlying inequity in the system" Matthews says. Under Goal 5, the environmental resources were all supposed to be inventoried at the beginning of the land use planning system and "there's not really any concrete mechanism to go back and add natural resources."

So while a section of land may be elk habitat, if it was not inventoried under Goal 5 as such, it won't be added later. However, there is a "complicated flow chart," Matthews says, that allows a gravel mine to be added to the Goal 5 inventory.

"When you go through that flow chart, 99 times out of 100 it ends in the local government having to acknowledge the gravel resource," he says. One possible way to escape it is if there's a conflict between gravel resources and other inventoried resources like wildlife habitat.

But, Matthews says, "Lane County has virtually no land in its wildlife habitat inventory. So they sort of set up a Catch-22 in that there's no given process for adding environmental resources. Just gravel."

Lane County Public Information Officer Devon Ashbridge says of Save TV Butte's petition, "We pay close attention to LUBA decisions, including the Hazeldell appeal, and evaluate those decisions to determine what effect they may have on future decision making."

Matthews says Save TV Butte faces a few challenges: not only understanding the complicated land use process in order to be able to fight the mine, but also fundraising to hire an attorney.

"Raising funds has been really iffy," Pokorny says, "but luckily some folks have stepped forward and helped us out." Save TV Butte is mainly "retired folks who live on Social Security," she adds.

The group represented itself through the county process, but has now hired attorney Zack Mittge of Hutchinson Cox to represent them before LUBA.

Fundraising involves making "a bazillion phone calls" and having a presence at local festivals and events, Pokorny says. Save TV Butte will participate in and wants to fundraise at the upcoming Oakridge Sugarplum Festival that is held each year in early December. ■

SLANT

• The welcome news this week is that Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigation into the Trump Administration's corrupt ties to Russia has borne its first fruit with three indictments.

The headlines were all about money-laundering charges against Paul Manafort and Rick Gates, but the real news was the secret guilty plea by former campaign adviser George Papadopoulos, who made a deal to rat out Trump and his cronies. The deal is "on the condition that your client continues to respond and provide information regarding any and all matters as to which the Government deems relevant," says the prosecution's letter to Papadopoulos' lawyers. We like the sound of that.

• Former Eugene Weekly news intern Kenny Jacoby scored a journalistic coup last week when Sports Illustrated published his lengthy and well-researched account of how the University of Oregon and its head basketball coach, Dana Altman, allowed Kavell Bigby-Williams to play an entire hoops season for the Ducks while under investigation for forcible rape in another state. Jacoby, who interned here last spring, is still an undergraduate in journalism. That guy will go far.

• Speaking of UO in the news, the school's president, Michael Schill, penned an Oct. 24 op-ed in The New York Times entitled "The Misguided Student Crusade Against 'Fascism'" in which he decries the "tactic of silencing, which has been deployed repeatedly at universities around the country," saying it "only hurts these activists' cause." Schill told The Register-Guard that he "had known the protest was likely so he recorded a video of his planned speech Thursday and released it Friday online." So wait, rather than devise a plan in which the students might get heard and he could deliver his own remarks, Schill planned to be pushed off the stage? That's not being silenced, that's using his position, a strategy the protesting students couldn't employ.

• Jefferson Smith has just won a wild contest for one of the coveted jobs in Oregon politics and public life. Starting in January, he'll be the director of the Oregon Center for Public Policy, the think tank based in Portland that grinds out the research behind progressive policy. Steve Novick, former Portland commissioner, also wanted the job, along with other candidates — and some funders weren't happy with either. Smith started the Oregon Bus Project in 2001, served in the Legislature, lost a race for mayor of Portland and then helped found the nonprofit radio station XRAY.FM. Quite a record. Now he will be a big player in the battle to keep Oregon blue.

• Big news in Manhattan is the sale of the iconic Lord & Taylor building to WeWork, an office rental company started seven years ago and now valued at $20 billion, according to The New York Times. Big news in Eugene is that one of the founders of WeWork is Miguel McKelvey, who grew up and went to school here before seeking his fortunes in the Big Apple. He's the son of Lucia McKelvey, one of the founders of Eugene Weekly, then called What's Happening.

Eugene woman joins with the homeless to clean up trash in the city's largest park

VOLUNTEERS HELP CLEAN UP

With the help of a few volunteers and support from the city, one community member started a biweekly trash cleanup project at Alton Baker Park.

"I've said it many times, I'm not a protester or an activist," project organizer Kathy Walker says. But she has made significant efforts to start a dialogue between the city and its unprotected, unhoused citizens.

In July, Walker was asked to meet with Eugene Mayor Lucy Vinis, and the two decided to organize and run a "town hall type" meeting in Alton Baker Park on Aug. 1. According to Walker, representatives from the city were invited to meet with the homeless, with the hope of creating conversation between the unhoused and other members in the community.

At the meeting, Walker says, there was a clear piece of common ground: "Both sides were sick of the garbage." She continues, "One 'camper' mentioned how hard it was to dispose of their garbage and how, if only they had the tools, they would even clean up other people's messes."

Walker says she tried to get Eugene Public Works to schedule garbage pickups on a regular basis, but the city department explained to her how overloaded they were and said it wouldn't be possible.

After a man pointed out that scheduled trash pickups would prevent full bags from being torn open and scattered everywhere, Walker decided to take matters into her own hands. And with the support of the mayor and the help of one other housed volunteer, "We did just that," Walker says.

Walker partnered with Eugene's Parks and Open Space, which granted her a three-month trial period of support and supplies. Parks and Open Space provides trash bags and park patrols, an authorized vehicle access permit for the trial period and made arrangements for Walker to have easy access to a garbage dumpster.

Walker organized in less than a week and officially began on Sept. 12. She goes with a driver and a few volunteers every other week to empty trash cans and pick up trash bags at Alton Baker Park.

"Illegal camping and the large amounts of trash and waste left behind has a huge impact on the park, including sensitive natural areas and water quality," Carrie Peterson, Parks and Open Space resource development manager, tells EW. "Park staff struggle to keep up with the extraordinarily high demand, and couldn't do it alone."

Walker started a GoFundMe campaign in mid-October to help offset the costs and give a little bit to the volunteers — all of whom are unhoused, according to Walker. "Our trial period ends in December, but I'm hoping we have made enough of an impact to continue indefinitely," she says.

"Efforts like Kathy's, ongoing river cleanup projects by Willamette Riverkeeper volunteers and the annual Great Willamette Cleanup are excellent examples of everyday people stepping up to make a big difference," Peterson says.

Walker says she also arranges unscheduled pickups on the off weeks when she can, and she spreads the word as much as possible. "All I did was put their idea into action," she says. "This helps us show the public that most of these people want to keep it clean — they just need a little help to make it happen." ■

IT'S ABOUT TIME

BY DAVID WAGNER

There is nothing like three days of hard rain to signal the proper end of summer and the beginning of the rainy season, aka our winter. We celebrate rain and cloudy skies for at least the next month or so. By February, many will tire of mist and drizzle, but for now we are happy to walk in the wet. The forest fires that have ravaged the nearby hills have been quenched. Deep pockets of coals will yet burn a while but the serious threat is over.

It is time to roll up the hoses and put away the hose timers. A sudden hard frost, which can happen with little warning, will ruin those timers so it is good to care for them now. We can enjoy a few more days of marigolds, zinnias and other annual flowers that are just past their peak production. What remains of the pole beans can be left to finish maturing before drying for next year's planting.

Among the most noxious, aggressive, non-native plants is English ivy. It has been widely used as an easily established ground cover. English ivy will continue to be used in landscapes despite its tendency to escape and overwhelm the understory of woodlands in urban parks. One of its odd traits is to bloom in late fall, providing a nectar source when little else is available. Honeybees love it. A surprise is how many native yellow jackets and wasps swarm their flower clusters, and even some evening moths.

SPRINGFIELD POLICE LEVY

Ballot measure would fund police department and jail

Chad Anderson was tired of being the victim of break-ins. He moved from Eugene, where his property was broken into five times, to Springfield, where it hasn't happened once.

"If you call the police in Eugene, they aren't going to come unless it's life threatening," Anderson says. "The Eugene police are underfunded, so they are stretched too thin."

Springfield residents will vote on ballot measure 20-273 on Nov. 4. If passed, the measure will continue to fund the Springfield Police Department and jail so they can maintain current service levels. The measure proposes a tax levy of $1.40 for every $1,000 of assessed property value, which would cost about $325 a year for a median-value home, up from the current $300 payment.

The current levy funding SPD and the jail expires next June.

Some residents are reluctant to approve another levy. Since Springfield instituted a levy of $0.66 per $1,000 of assessed property value in 2002, the tax has increased to $1.09 in 2006 and to $1.28 in 2012.

Anderson doesn't mind the additional tax, even if the number of officers and other employees wouldn't increase with the extra funds.

"What it is, is you aren't losing what you paid for," says Anderson, a local business owner. "I own two houses in Springfield. I'll be paying for this. I don't mind. They were effective with the money they got."

Lt. Scott McKee is a 32-year police veteran who says Springfield residents have a sense of security because they know there are consequences for criminal behavior. "With all my years of experience, there is a connection between that sense of safety and an environment where there is a consequence — that is, a functioning jail," McKee says.

The 100-bed facility in Springfield, which recently incorporated space for up to 18 female inmates, is the largest municipal jail in the state. The levy will fully fund the jail along with 40 jail, police and court positions.

Since the jail opened in 2010, property crime in Springfield has dropped 30 percent.

"A 30 percent reduction is really significant," McKee says. "If you look around, it's hard to find an agency that has experienced that much success in that short a period of time."

Anderson says he had a customer express doubt that the levy will help. According to Anderson, she said that putting people in jail doesn't necessarily fix them. Prison skeptics would prefer to see police departments take measures to prevent crime rather than react to it.

McKee says the levy does just that. Before the jail became "efficient," McKee says, offenders had a failure-to-appear rate of about 60 percent. That rate has dropped to about 26 percent since the prison overhaul.

"My position is that a consequence environment, where there are consequences for criminal behavior, is also a crime prevention aspect," McKee says.

Beyond crime prevention, McKee says, the original levy gave SPD the resources to send more officers in response to calls. "In order to maintain the ability to send an actual police officer when you call for police assistance," McKee says, "it's imperative that you have the ability to have a functioning, operating police budget."

McKee adds, "I think there's an expectation, especially in Springfield; they expect they will get a police officer who will get there in a timely manner."

Officer response time in Eugene was Anderson's biggest complaint about EPD. In 2016, the median response time from dispatch to arrival for SPD officers responding to a priority 1 call — one with a threat to life — was 2 minutes and 53 seconds; the median response time for priority 2 calls — which involve a threat to property — was less than 5 minutes.

Over the same period of time, EPD officers took anywhere from 10 to 14 minutes to respond to priority 1 and 2 calls; the department issues only combined statistics on its response time.

Anderson says he is happy with the overall direction Springfield is moving. His quality of life has improved, he says, and he feels confident that SPD is keeping his community safe.

"In Springfield, you will go to jail," he says. "In Springfield, you'll get caught and you'll sit in jail for a while. And they have room." ■

BEST OF EUGENE READERS POLL

BEST LOCAL WORLD-CHANGER

1. Congressman Peter DeFazio
2. Mark Frohnmayer Arcimoto
3. Kelsey Cascadia Rose Juliana plaintiff with the Our Children's Trust climate lawsuit

Congressman Peter DeFazio was elected in 1986. He's now "the longest serving House member in Oregon's history," according to his website. He sat down with Eugene Weekly to talk about his biggest current challenges and winning Best World-Changer and Best Local Politician. We've gotta say, we love how he shows up to speeches wearing his Smokey Bear "Resist" t-shirt and his don't-take-any-crap-from-anyone attitude that he attributes to his wrestling coach, who was also his dad.

How does it feel to be selected by Eugene Weekly readers as a World-Changer and Best Local Politician?

World-changer is a new one to me. That's incredible — I hope I can. I'm trying to keep Trump from starting World War III. I've got a war powers resolution to fix the War Powers Act and require prior authorization before any offensive action by the president. Right now the law would allow him to attack North Korea, then report to Congress later — a little too late. I guess I am trying to change the world. I also happen to believe that climate change is a serious problem, which unfortunately doesn't enjoy a majority support in Washington, D.C. — detached from reality right now. I guess I do deal with world problems.

Local politician, I think I've gotten that award before. I'm honored to get that. I work in a really difficult environment now, and getting a little support at home is really welcome.

Why did you originally decide to run for office?

Oh, that was a long time ago. I worked for the former Congressman Jim Weaver, learned a lot from him and ultimately I was working for him in Washington, hated Washington and wanted to come back to Oregon. I lived in Springfield, and Springfield at that point owned a minuscule part of the Washington public power supply system; they had a proposal to build five nuclear plants. The plants were billions of dollars over budget, indebting my tiny little town. I got involved in that and filed a lawsuit that was ultimately successful. A lot of people were saying to me "You know you should run for office," because I had held some of the first demonstrations ever in the city of Springfield. We surrounded the utility board, burned our bills and a few other things. I then decided to run for county commissioner against the incumbent Republican county commissioner.

What do you think your biggest challenge is going to be in the coming couple of weeks and years?

The thing that's taking most of my time right now is stopping the chairman of the [House] Transportation Committee from privatizing air traffic control in the United States and giving control of it to the airlines, who in my opinion don't run their own airlines very well — let alone taking over our national airspace.

Has the president tried to work at all on coming to the other side of the aisle?

I have not met with the president; I have met with his chief infrastructure guru and, unfortunately, his predilection is to privatize our infrastructure. I'm trying to bring them around to something that might really work, as opposed to something that's ideological and that isn't going to work. They're some radical proposals. — Corinne Boyer

3. Greenhill Humane Society 88530 Green Hill Rd. 541-689-1503. green-hill.org.

A shake-up in the top three! After a year away from the crown, FOOD for Lane County recaptures its title as Eugene's favorite nonprofit. The hunger-fighting organization served more than 80,000 meals to children around the county this summer and continues to grow its services. From youth farm roadside stands to job training at its warehouses, FOOD for Lane County shines for its commitment to helping Eugene's most vulnerable populations.

Second-place winner St. Vincent de Paul continues to evolve new programs to reduce waste and serve the community. This year it took on an important project revamping trailer parks to create better options for low-cost housing. SVDP's solutions-forward model has diverted thousands of mattresses from landfills through its world-renowned repurposing projects.

This year EW shared a heartwarming story with Greenhill Humane Society when Tank, the "unadoptable" pitbull featured in our July 27 Pets issue, found a home. Greenhill was third in Best Local Nonprofit and winner of Best Animal Nonprofit this year. — Carl Segerstrom

BEST THING ABOUT EUGENE

1. People
2. Diversity
3. Food

Let me preface this by saying I am not mad, but even more so, I'm just straight-up confused. You know, when your parents used to say, "I'm not mad; I'm just disappointed"? That's how I'm approaching this situation. As a half-black, half-Filipina person who has lived in Eugene my whole life, I just have to ask — what makes this town diverse? You, Best Of Eugene voters, don't mean racially diverse, right? We, the people of Eugene, are not that disillusioned, are we? Or have we just come to accept that a town that is more than 85 percent white, according to the census, in some way counts as diverse? You don't mean politically diverse, or diverse in thought, do you? Yes, we have activists and outspoken individuals on both sides of the political spectrum, but so does every other town. How about economically? No, that doesn't make much sense either, in comparison to other towns of our size and location. Style? I guess we do have diversity in what kind of socks we wear with our Birkenstocks. (Is it going to be straightforward wool today, or should I go with something patterned? Hmm. As long as it matches my Columbia raincoat, I guess!) Maybe it's the weather. It sure does rain a lot here, but sometimes it's sunny and sometimes we even get a little snow! Yeah, I'm going to give you all the benefit of the doubt; let's just go with the weather. — Meerah Powell

BEST TEACHER/ PROFESSOR

1. Stella Strother-Blood Agnes Stewart Middle School
2. (Tie) Dan Tichenor University of Oregon
2. (Tie) Taunya DeBoer Willamette Leadership Academy
3. Leah Dunbar Churchill High School

This was the first year that we asked you to name Eugene's best teacher or professor, and we got an overwhelming number of votes. It's important to recognize the teachers who inspire us — who stand out among the masses and make a lasting impact in our lives. This year's best of them all? Stella Strother-Blood from Agnes Stewart Middle School.

"The kids at Agnes Stewart are amazing, the administration is wonderful," Strother-Blood says. "I can't believe they recognized me!"

This is only Strother-Blood's second year as a full-time teacher — she was a student teacher at the school for a year before — but her passion for the job is clear. "I've always been really interested in serving others, and I was brought up to care about other people and recognize that, in life, it's not all about me," she says. "Teaching is just a really efficient and effective way to interact with others and to leave a good impression with students."

From the Eugene/Springfield area herself, Strother-Blood left town to get her undergraduate degree at Western Oregon University and came back to get her master's in teaching at the University of Oregon. She knew she wanted to teach language arts and social studies to inspire kids to learn about the world, even if they haven't had opportunities to travel.

As for teaching sixth grade, Strother-Blood loves everything from helping kids open their lockers for the first time to seeing them grow throughout the year. "It's just so unique," Strother-Blood says. "Kids are excited to be out of elementary school and move into a new territory. It's fun to be a part of that because it's such a special time."

Strother-Blood says she has never sought to be someone's favorite teacher, but she has sought to be a supportive, positive influence. "If I can leave that impression, then I'll have succeeded."

As for the future, "I want to be here, in the Eugene/Springfield area, teaching sixth grade language arts and social studies at Agnes Stewart Middle School," Strother-Blood says. "I feel like it's so rare to find exactly what you want to do forever, but I have, and I'm honored." — Morgan Theophil

Alton Baker, Eugene's biggest park, tops the list again this year. The park hugs the north bank of the Willamette River and has just about every park activity you can imagine, from disc golf to dog parks and boating to BMXing. You can even find an (albeit unsanctioned) open-air market under the gazebos, if you're into that kind of stuff. — Carl Segerstrom

Athena Delene has been surrounded by photography her whole life. Growing up with a photographer for a mother, Delene's career started earlier than most. "My mom would always enter the Lane County Fair photo exhibit," Delene says. "When I was 13, she let me enter for the first year. I ended up winning the people's choice award for the whole exhibit — after that I was ready to go photo crazy."

She says her mom helped her develop her style and skills, but Delene has undoubtedly created a photographic style entirely her own. You've most likely seen her photos of local musicians, artists and business owners within the Weekly's pages, as she's been freelancing for EW off-and-on for almost five years now.

"I've always really loved the thought of being able to take a photo of someone that they love so much it's the one they show their kids down the road," Delene says. "And then their kids keep it because it's their favorite photo of their grandparents they show off."

As far as the kind of subject matter she likes to photograph, Delene says it varies. "I love old men with mustaches, anyone who says 'I hate getting my photo taken,' aspiring middle-school musicians," Delene says. "But, really, any kind of artist in action or business owner. I just like working with people who like to work; doing photos of someone doing what they love is always my goal." — Meerah Powell

BEST MURAL

1. Woman with Snakes, Ila Rose Elevation Builder Gym at 348 W. 3rd Ave.
2. Tiger and Dragon, Hua Tunan Vistra Framing and Gallery, 411 W. 4th St.
3. Bee of Wildcraft, Steven Lopez WildCraft Cider Works, 254 Lincoln St.

Her newest creation of art, a show-stopping piece covering the walls of another building in Eugene, has clearly captured the attention of many, as Ila Rose — a Eugene native and lifelong painter — is not only the winner of this year's Best Mural, but is crowned Best Artist as well.

"There was never a starting point for art for me, it's just always been what I do," Rose says.

The winning mural dignifies the north and east walls of the Elevation Builder Gym at 348 W. 3rd Avenue and features a two-faced head of a woman with snakes in her hair. The mural is centered on the corner connecting both walls, and the geometric patterns in the green and yellow backdrop create a perfect contrast to focus in on the detail of the woman looking out onto the two. At the second glance, you see a young girl reaching out to greet the woman.

"Essentially, it's about how children face obstacles with more of an openness and curiosity than adults," Rose says. "This child is facing what an adult might see as a beast, but the child is looking and examining differently, pondering what lessons can be learned rather than seeing it as something scary to avoid."

Rose's mural is part of the 20x21Eug Mural Project, a city initiative to create 20 or more world-class outdoor murals in Eugene between now and the 2021 IAAF World Championships. She reached out to the project committee about their inclusion of local artists in the project; they gave her a wall and she came up with the design in only a week.

"Murals are an awesome way to make a public statement and engage with the world around us," Rose says. "I wanted to paint one as a way to engage with my local community and just connect with the people in Eugene."

Rose says this mural was in part a response to her first public mural that paints another wall in Eugene, at 5th Alley and Blair Boulevard, that she did as a commission for the Whiteaker Community Art Team a few years back. "Imagery in this mural was born from shifting around images and thoughts from my other mural," she says.

The project brought in artists from around the world, and Rose says at times she felt she had less technical skill than some. But, she says, the support she received as a member of the community kept her going. "There is so much support for local artists in Eugene, and that really helped me feel like I could be successful," Rose explains. "I've always had my whole town behind me, and that is really cool."

What's in Rose's future? "Finding something with a salary," she laughs. She is considering going to graduate school and getting a degree to teach art in an educational setting. "Whatever I do, I'll always be creating art."

The remarkable second-place mural — an intricate, deep-red wall featuring a battle between tigers and a black dragon — was created by Chinese artist Hua Tunan. The mural is powerful, displaying the result of a focused combination of traditional Chinese art and the act of graffiti. The action-filled, detailed creation can be found on the west wall of Vistra Framing and Gallery, at 411 W. 4th Street.

Steven Lopez, the artist behind the third-place mural, works and lives in Los Angeles but graduated with a degree in fine arts from the University of Oregon. His mural is vibrant in color and grand in character — a dynamic bee stands out among a geometric honeycomb, creating an extravagant scene with a subtle environmental message about the importance of wildlife in our world. The bright, elaborate mural can be seen on west side of WildCraft Cider Works' warehouse at 254 Lincoln Street. — Morgan Theophil

Led by artistic director Craig Willis, Oregon Contemporary Theatre has distinguished itself as Eugene's foremost purveyor of new and challenging theatrical works — plays that often exhibit a kind of urbane, postmodern sensibility with a slightly dark or absurdist edge. And the productions, regularly directed by Willis himself or OCT associate producer Tara Wibrew, are always top notch — well designed, superbly acted — and they reveal an implicit trust in the intelligence and sophistication of the audience (rather than continually dusting off safe old standards everyone's seen a zillion times). Of course, OCT isn't above celebrating the classics of theater, as when a few seasons back they mounted a stunning rendition of Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The company continually raises the bar for theater in Eugene, which keeps everyone on their toes and makes the community of the stage that much stronger all around. — Rick Levin

Popular Eugene guitar-pop band Fortune's Folly is building a reputation around the region for high-energy performances, sparked by charismatic front-person Calysta Cheyenne, who's a little bit Gwen Stefani with some grunge-rock attitude.

Listening to Fortune's Folly, it's hard not to crack a grin, so when Cheyenne heard the news her band won EW's Best of Eugene Best Band category, she said just what you might expect: "Yay! We owe it to our amazing fans." And when it recently came time to make a music video, Cheyenne says, Fortune's Folly wanted to get those fans involved.

"It's for a song off our Red EP called 'Wouldn't Make You Mine,'" she explains. "Our film crew got a bunch of people together, fans and community members. They all got dressed up like Pacific Northwest animals: crows and stags and rabbits, mice and all kinds of stuff. That's going to come out before the end of the year."

And in 2018, Fortune's Folly hopes to build on their local success up in Portland and beyond. But Cheyenne says Fortune's Folly owes it to Eugene audiences most of all. "We're really happy with how well we're being received," she says, "and how much the fanbase is growing." — Will Kennedy

"I am one of those actors that really disappears in the characters," says Rebecca Nachison, voted this year's Best Actor by Eugene theatergoers. "Seeing me walking down the street, you may not know that I was the hard, fierce nun in Doubt, or the German grandma in Lost in Yonkers. Nachison, who plays Molly in Radio Redux's live production of Fibber McGee and Molly this weekend (Nov. 3-5 at the Hult), says she's been drawn to the theater since childhood, noting that she loves digging into a good role — and the messier and darker the character, the better, such as her turn as the drug-addicted Violet in Oregon Contemporary Theatre's 2013 production of Tracy Lett's August: Osage County. EW critic William Kennedy noted Nachison's fierceness as an actor in his 2015 review of Lost in Yonkers at Very Little Theatre. "As the fearsome matriarch Grandma," Kennedy writes, "Rebecca Nachison steals every scene with quiet menace, the tap-tap-tap of her cane signaling dread." Bravo, we say! — Rick Levin

2. Calysta Cheyenne of Fortune's Folly fortunesfollyband.com.
3. Bettreena Jaeger bettyandtheboy.com.

THE SINGER

Halie Loren might be Eugene's hardest working person in show business. She spends long stretches of time on the road, touring the world with her pop-jazz combo, so news of tying for first in EW's Best of Eugene Best Singer-Songwriter category came as somewhat of a surprise. "I'm really honored," she tells me over the phone. "I've been gone since late August — touring, and out of the country most of the time."

But whether it's playing jazz in Japan or performing around town with folk-pop outfit Halie and The Moon or popular acoustic-dance mainstays The Sugar Beets, Loren never forgets Eugene is her home. "I'm thrilled to still be here, to still be local, to be able to live in this community and be able to share my music with the very people I started my career playing for."

Loren says all her projects provide outlets for her voice and style in different ways. And after a successful Kickstarter campaign, Loren is in the studio working on an album of all original material. She calls her new stuff a step in a different direction that reflects the breadth of her musical influences. "Which not only includes jazz," she explains, "which I'm known for, but also folk and soul and blues. Even a bit of world music." And she says a lot of her new material is very vocally oriented. "It's really quite different from anything else I've ever done," Loren adds.

But no matter what project she's working on, she says her music always starts with a melody. "The words fall into place based on what the melody is speaking to me," Loren explains. "I have to integrate lyric and melody together." But nothing makes her heart happier than to have the support of local fans. "I'm just so overwhelmed to have been chosen," she says. — Will Kennedy

THE SURVIVOR

Eugene rapper Endr Won has been through a lot to get where he is today: married, a father and touring the U.S. supporting his latest release, Bigger Than Me. "It's a blessing," Won tells me over the phone from Salt Lake City. He calls life on the road a lot of work. "But what's beautiful," he adds, "is being able to take the gift that I have and reach other people."

Bigger Than Me is available on all digital music and streaming services, and it's Won's first new music since struggling with addiction and mental health issues. "I'm a recovering addict and alcoholic," Won explains. "I used to actually live on the streets of downtown Eugene. I'm diagnosed with anxiety, depression, PTSD. I was going through some things."

Won says a friend encouraged him to get back to writing and performing. "He said, 'I know it's been a minute since you put pen to paper,'" Won recalls, "'but I know you still got the fire in you and people need to hear your story.'" And getting back in the game rekindled Won's love for hip hop. "I believe wholeheartedly in the culture of hip hop," he says. "I believe that hip hop with substance, with a message, is something people yearn for."

Now, Won says, he's humbled by tying for first place in EW's Best Singer-Songwriter category. "To say I'm humbled is an understatement," Won adds. "The life I've lived, just to be breathing is a blessing, let alone rap and travel cross-country and have people care to listen."

Won calls his fans family. "Anybody that knows me knows I could really care less about being in some kind of competition," he admits. "My competition is with my man in the mirror. It's an honor to think people out there listen to my music and love my music enough to vote for me." —Will Kennedy

The Southern-inspired vegan diner Cornbread Cafe offers a wide variety of comfort foods typically unavailable to vegans, such as fried chicken and gravy and a bacon ranch burger. Owner Sheree Walters uses ingredients such as tofu and tempeh to hold the place of meat in those recipes. Walters says she learned to cook from scratch from her grandmother, which led her to open the Cornbread Cafe food cart in 2010. The cart only stayed open for a year, quickly moving its way up to a full restaurant. Walters says the focus at Cornbread is on organic, local and fair-trade ingredients.

After being featured on the Food Network show “Diners, Drive-ins and Dives,” Cornbread Cafe saw a significant spike in popularity. “People from around the country travel to eat here after the Food Network show,” Walters says. “Some people make travel plans for years.”

Not only is Cornbread Cafe the best vegan spot with the Eugene Weekly readership, but according to Walters, “a lot of people who come from the South give [Cornbread Cafe] a big thumbs up.” — Jordan Rich

Brails has extended its reign as Eugene’s Best Hangover Breakfast to 14 straight years and, let’s be honest, it’s hard to top a restaurant in the Best Hangover Breakfast category with an item called “The Hangover Special.”

Joy Knudtson, owner of Brails, says she’s proud of her restaurant’s reputation and the fact it brings people back time and again. She says she loves it when old students come back to town for football games or just to visit, because they always come in to say hi.

And if the food isn’t enough, the service and atmosphere will convert any non-believer. “We have a ‘Cheers’ mentality,” server Nicole Kneisler says, cribbing the line from the classic sit-com: “Everyone here knows your name.” — Max Thornberry

Sweet Life Patisserie takes the cake again (and again and again), winning Best Desserts and Best Bakery in Eugene after another delicious year. Sweet Life's countless handmade treats — from heavenly, chocolate-cheesecake cupcakes to citrusy, fresh-fruit filled tarts, and everything in between — follow traditional French and classic American recipes and are made with local ingredients whenever possible. The sister-owned shop has two ever-popular locations — “to make life even sweeter” — that also feature a range of gluten-, egg- and dairy-free options. As each dessert is individually placed with perfection on a simple plate, embellished with a dusting of powdered sugar, a drizzle of chocolate or a simple mint leaf, you can't miss why Sweet Life always comes out on top. — Morgan Theophil

If Eugene had an official drink, it would have to be kombucha, right? Although the idea of fermented tea might give some people the heebie jeebies, this tasty, fizzy drink is a Eugene — and Pacific Northwest — staple. And you voted that Townshend's Brew Dr. Kombucha does it best! Brew Dr.'s flavors include the very autumnal “Spiced Apple,” pretty much apple pie in a bottle; “Love,” a jasmine and lavender brew; and “Happiness,” a white tea and rose petal brew, and that's just the tip of the iceberg. They also have notable seasonal flavors like “Vanilla Oak” and “Mango Habanero.” Townshend's Tea Company started in 2006, according to its website, and began making kombucha in 2008. Now Brew Dr. is distributed across the U.S. and Canada, with Townshend's shops here in Eugene and Portland, as well as Montana and Utah. So, whether you're a kombucha aficionado or a first-time taster, Brew Dr. is a great option. (Also, full disclosure: We get some delivered to the EW office, and we love it!) — Meerah Powell

Go ahead, mock Dutch Bros. It's sugary milk coffee, you say. Well, you know what? Sometimes in the Northwest, a latte is comfort food, and there are mornings where the only thing keeping you going is swinging by the little white box with its cute little windmill and those relentlessly happy people inside dispensing caffeine and dog treats. For those of you who prefer your caffeine a little more hipster, Wandering Goat's beans are truly epic, and we take out-of-town guests to the Whit just to sample them. Vero is last but not least in our Readers Poll, combining a hot latte with a cheery campus atmosphere. If you are doing a drive (walk or bike) by, then Dutch Bros. is your place, but for the laptop crowd on a rainy day, Vero and Wandering Goat have you covered. — Camilla Mortensen

Papa's Soul Food Kitchen is closing this year, leaving behind a 15-year legacy of culture, music, and finger-lickin' barbecue. Since Ted "Papa" Lee died in 2012, the restaurant stayed open under the leadership of his widow, Debra Lee. "It was awesome to have it, especially after he passed away, to have that support system. It felt like he was still here," Lee says. "It helped me to heal from his passing." She adds, "I miss doing it with him." Lee says she's not sure what she'll do after closing the restaurant, but says she's looking forward to taking a breather and turning off her electronics for a while.

A juggernaut of Best of Eugene, Papa's has won Best Barbeque repeatedly over the years, and this year tops the list for both Best Barbeque and Best Comfort Food. And why not? With its cute, homey menu and atmosphere and delectable Southern delights, Papa's has been a staple of the Whiteaker for over a decade. It has some of the best cornbread in town, incredible hush puppies, and beef brisket that melts in your mouth — not to mention gumbo and Nawlins style jambalaya. It's always a battle to pick the best sides on that robust menu. Lee says she's grateful for the support she's had from the community since Papa's passing. "It's been eight years since he passed away, and just having his memory still here and being able to share his dream with the community is really important to me." On getting picked for Best of Eugene, she says, "It feels really good to go out with a bang." Lee hopes the community will keep Papa's memory alive "in their own way" now that the restaurant is closing — though she's not sure when. She recommends filling your need for great BBQ at Tony's, a food cart on River Road in Santa Clara.

Eugene is losing an institution, but we're excited to see what fills that gap on the coveted corner of 4th and Blair. Best wishes to Lee and the entire staff as they take their next steps in life after Papa and Papa's Soul Food. — Kelly Kenoyer

For less than eight bucks, it doesn't get any better for Eugene residents than eating a quick meal at one of myriad Café Yumm locations. Café Yumm offers a number of healthy bowls, wraps, bentos (Japanese-style lunch boxes usually served with rice and vegetables), sandwiches, soups and salads.

Café Yumm caters not only to the price-conscious diner but to the health-minded as well, mixing in avocados, organic beans, salsa and greens with chicken, tempeh or tofu. Let's be real here, though: Café Yumm's primary draw is its Yumm sauce, an addicting mix of garbanzo and soy beans, lemon juice, garlic and basil — sort of a creamy, tangy hummus that true disciples can buy in separate bottles to bring home. Café Yumm's Yumm bowls and Yumm sauce have been local favorites since 1993, and judging by the many Yelp adherents, crowded restaurants and EW staff who have addictions to it, it isn't going to slow down anytime soon. — Matthew Denis

It's easy to see why Mezza Luna, with Sizzle Pie hot on its heels, is a fan-favorite pizza joint. Both offer a variety of gourmet pizza by the slice at a fair price. And they up the fun when naming their creations, like the Boba Feta at Mezza Luna or the White Walker at Sizzle Pie. First-place winner Mezza Luna's restaurant environment is very "Eugene," with chill music and tons of natural lighting, perfect for date night. Second-place Sizzle Pie's environment is grungy, often with metal or punk music playing and the motto "death to false pizza" written on their boxes. BEST WINERY

1. Sweet Cheeks Winery 27007 Briggs Hill Rd. 541-349-9463; 248 E. 5th St. Suite 25. sweetcheekswinery.com.
2. King Estate Winery 80854 Territorial Hwy. 541-942-9874. kingestate.com.
3. Sarver Winery 25600 Mayola Ln. 541-935-2979. sarverwinery.com.

The Willamette Valley is wine country, and Sweet Cheeks offers plenty for sommeliers and novices alike. You can't believe everything you read on the internet, but a slew of 4- and 5-star reviews makes a case for why Sweet Cheeks is a repeat winner for Best Winery in Eugene. The setting — both location and atmosphere — sets Sweet Cheeks apart from the rest of the hotly contested pack. — Max Thornberry

BEST BAR

2. Sam Bond's 407 Blair Blvd. 541-431-6601. sambonds.com.
3. Izakaya Meiji 345 Van Buren St. 541-505-8804. izakayameiji.com.

After more than two years as Eugene's go-to LGBTQIA bar, The Wayward Lamb shows no sign of slowing down. Not only considered the place to be in the queer community, The Wayward Lamb is the spot for anyone looking to let loose and shake down in a welcoming scene. There's not much the gathering place doesn't offer. A front bar supplies space to sip tasty drinks and to savor snacks, salads and sandwiches over good conversation. A backroom gives patrons a spot to catch drag cabaret, rock out in the lip sync contest as well as room to simply shake their tail feathers. On Wednesday, there's even trivia night to test your inner nerd.

University of Oregon journalism student Derek Maiolo (perhaps harkening to the most interesting man in the world) says that, "I don't go to the bar very often, but when I do, I go to The Wayward Lamb." Hear, hear, Derek. We'll meetcha' there. — Matthew Denis

When Buck Buck made its debut, it took this town by storm. Maybe it filled a vacuum in the department of excellent fried chicken, maybe people liked the simple menu. Regardless of the cause, the cart now has long lines from open till close most days. Owner Mikey Lawrence is so dedicated to the craft of delicious chicken that he has a meat cleaver tattooed next to his eye. And that chicken — usually paired with a fluffy biscuit — is melt-in-your-mouth tender, with a perfect crunchy coat on the outside. And if you're feeling truly decadent, you can get the chicken and waffles — a soft, perfect waffle topped with crunchy fried chicken and doused in blackberry compote. You'll never want to eat anything else ever again. — Kelly Kenoyer

3. Cam McNeeley Moss Crossing. 2751 Friendly St. 541-636-2734. mosscrossing.com.

Anna Kaplan opened SugarTop Buddery in 2015 together with her sibling Jarrod. SugarTop supplies local dispensaries with a variety of strains, often in the form of their specialty, pre-rolled bats. In 2014, Kaplan left her two jobs as an artist and restaurant manager in Philadelphia to join her world-class drummer brother in the marijuana cultivation business.

Kaplan is an infectious voice in Eugene's recreational cannabis scene. A conversation with her is like being on the other end of a verbal Gatling gun, manned by a happy Rambo, gleefully mowing the other party down with her various campaigns.

In addition to her responsibilities at SugarTop, Kaplan serves as president of the nonprofit Women Leaders in Cannabis, seeking to normalize the presence of women in the cannabis industry and destabilize any social stigma that might be attached to it. The nonprofit also partners with groups like Hope in Our Valley Oregon, which aims to help PTSD victims, and the Rock, Paper, Scissors Foundation to help heal and prevent violence.

Kaplan also helps to ally SugarTop and the Eugene marijuana community in shared marketing efforts. "It's more important than ever to remain local and support Eugene businesses," Kaplan says. — Matthew Denis

BEST LOCAL FOOD MARKET

- 1. The Kiva 125 W. 11th Ave. 541-342-8666. kivagrocery.com.
- 2. (Tie) Market of Choice 1060 Green Acres Rd. 541-344-1901; 1960 Franklin Blvd., 541-687-1188; 67 W. 29th Ave. 541-338-8455; 2580 Willakenzie Rd. 541-345-3349. marketofchoice.com.
- 2. (Tie) Capella Market. 2489 Willamette St. 541-345-1014. capellamarket.com.
- 3. Sundance Natural Foods 748 E. 24th Ave. 541-343-9142. sundancenaturalfoods.com.

It's comes as no surprise to EW that The Kiva again comes in atop the category of Best Local Market. When the big bosses of the EW newsroom go to lunch, they don't say "let's grab lunch"; they say, "ready for the Kiva" or "time for a Kiva run." The family owned Kiva Grocery started as a "Hippie Mall" in 1970 and has been the do-it-all natural food store at its current downtown location since 1983.

Runners up in this category include the well-lit and borderline supermarket mini-chain Market of Choice, Capella Market and Sundance Natural Foods.

It's worth noting that, outside of The Kiva, these small natural markets tend to be concentrated in the more affluent neighborhoods of South Eugene. Here's to hoping West Eugene can have some more fresh-food options in the future. — Carl Segerstrom

BEST INDIE BOOKSTORE

- 2. Smith Family Bookstore 525 Willamette St. 541-343-4717; 768 E. 13th Ave. 541-345-1651. smithfamilybookstore.com.
- 3. J. Michaels 160 E. Broadway. 541-342-2002. jmichaelsbooks.com.

Tsunami Books is a book lover's dream. The store that looks so tiny from Willamette Street was purchased more than 20 years ago, and was converted from a warehouse to a bookstore that is focused on the community. "We would call ourselves a community bookstore," Scott Landfield, owner of Tsunami Books says. "We respond to what people who come in here want."

Apart from more than 4,000 events Tsunami has hosted over the years, the public is invested — in every sense of the word — in the store. Customers are urged to "inquire within" if they want to help support Tsunami stay alive. Thanks to Landfield's reliance on the public to help raise the $300,000 he needs to secure a lease for the next 10 years, the community focused store holds on to its reign as Eugene's Best Indie Bookstore. — Max Thornberry

VOLUNTEER Friends of Buford Park & Mt. Pisgah Native Plant Volunteer Work Party, 9am-noon today, Saturday, Tuesday,

Día de los Muertos (Day of the Dead) is a holiday that originated in Mexico, but is celebrated all throughout Latin America. Luckily, if you want to take part in celebrating and recognizing the lives of the deceased, there are events happening right here in town! The Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art (1430 Johnson Lane) is wrapping up its multi-day Día de los Muertos celebration from 6-9 pm Thursday, Nov. 2. The event will feature traditional art, music, food, dance and poetry as well as altars with offerings. The event is FREE. For more Día de los Muertos fun, head to Maude Kerns Art Center (1910 E. 15th Avenue) to check out their Day of the Dead exhibit featuring photographer Salina Canizales and acrylic painter Eileen Finn (whose painting is the image for this blurb). It's running through Friday, Nov. 3. Maude Kerns has a suggested donation of $3 per person and $5 per family. — Meerah Powell

Word on the street is Tyler, The Creator is all grown up. The 26-year-old rapper, who rose to fame as a part of the hip-hop collective Odd Future (also known by its longer name Odd Future Wolf Gang Kill Them All), met widespread acclaim with the release of his fourth studio album, Flower Boy, in July of this year — showcasing his most mature sounding material yet. But, more than that he's quite the entrepreneur; he's gearing up to release the fall/winter collection of his clothing line, GOLF, he just released a signature shoe with Converse and recently launched two TV shows, Nuts + Bolts on Viceland and The Jellies on Adult Swim. Despite his busy schedule, the influential rapper will be stopping by McDonald Theatre on his current tour. You could catch Tyler, The Creator, with opener Taco, at 9 pm, Saturday, Nov. 4, at Mcdonald Theatre, but the show is sold out. — Meerah Powell

I know. Halloween just passed. We haven't even made it to Thanksgiving yet. But, it's never too early to start thinking about what gifts to buy friends and family for the upcoming winter holiday season. On Saturday, Nov. 4, from 10 am to 4 pm the Friends of Eugene Public Library is hosting a Holiday Gifts Book Sale at the downtown Eugene Public Library. Books in "gift-giving condition" will be for sale. All proceeds go to supporting Eugene Public Library programs. Both parking and admission to the book sale are FREE. From Friday, Nov. 3, to Sunday, Nov. 5, the Holiday Food & Gift Festival is taking place at the Lane Events Center. The festival features over 120 exhibitors selling an array of wares. There will also be food for purchase and sample. Parking and admission is FREE for this event as well. The Campbell Community Center (155 High Street) is also putting on its annual Holiday Bazaar from 9 am to 3 pm this Saturday, Nov. 4. The bazaar not only includes items for sale, but also raffles and a silent auction. This event is also FREE. For more events to shop for holiday gifts, check out the full calendar and make sure to pick up our Holiday Happenings issue for more holiday-related events Nov. 16 and our Gift Guide issue Nov. 22. — Meerah Powell

SUFFER THE LITTLE CHILDREN

The Florida Project, about beautiful losers shackled up in a fleabag motel, is the best film of the year

There's one scene in particular that perfectly captures the generous, heartbreaking humanity animating The Florida Project, director Sean Baker's tragicomic ode to the tattered residents of a flea-bitten motel in the heart of Florida's commercialized wasteland of strip malls and amusement parks.

In the scene, the motel's long-suffering manager, Bobby (Willem Dafoe), addresses a trio of flamingos that have wandered into the driveway outside the main office. Like some middle-aged Christ, weary and sun-scorched but infinitely patient, Bobby explains to the "girls" that he's already warned them about the threat of getting run over, so maybe they'd best just move along. The birds look at him quizzically.

Bobby, with a sigh, reiterates his warming, shooing them gently. After a pause, the birds reluctantly turn and, with several backward looks, bored and defiant, they all tiptoe lazily into the grass like cotton balls on stilts.

The implication is that this is a daily routine, with the beleaguered manager saving the birds from their own avian stupidity with loving concern and baffled exhaustion, both parties trapped in an absurd ritual that may indeed recapitulate the fallen nature of the universe itself.

Dafoe has never been better, and he's not even the best thing about The Florida Project. At the heart of the film is 6-year-old Moonee, the ringleader of a gaggle of latchkey kids whose parents, in various stages of delinquency, disarray and trouble with the law, have established temporary residence at the motel.

Played with painful authenticity by Brooklynn Prince, Moonee confronts the surreality of her world — the garish and outsized consumer hell of theme-park Florida, an infantilized adult fantasia whose humid neon facade belies the human wreckage that scurries in its shadows — with the defiant spirit of childhood: feisty, charming and free-spirited, aggressively joyful and yet vulnerable, and ever defiant in the face of the suffering that threatens to swallow her whole. Prince's performance here is flat-out amazing; she steals every scene she's in.

Moonee's mother, Halley (the equally fantastic Bria Vinaite), is a wayward millennial, a bus-stop single mother in tats and tank top who lies and cheats and steals and turns tricks to survive, and who loves her daughter with all her heart. Halley and Moonee are mirrors of each other, survivors caught at ground zero of the failed American experiment. They are that "other half" rarely represented in movies, and never have they been so captured in all their flailing, glorious, complicated humanity.

The arc of The Florida Project is loping and gangly, a film that gathers momentum slowly as it presents a series of vignettes evoking the daily struggles of people whose downward trajectory is merely house odds in modern society. And yet the film refuses to present these people as victims; rather, it seeks to evoke them in all their complex humanity. It rescues their lives from the classic Hollywood sump of melodrama, bestowing upon them the dignity they so furiously fight to maintain.

Baker, as director, keeps the focus tight on the kids who populate the motel, granting us entrance into their secret world, and in so doing he suffuses his film with a childlike sense of awe that is hypnotic and often exuberant. And yet, always lurking in the corners is the adult world, which is violent and scary and confusing. That world dooms childhood from within and without, an inevitability that no Disney fantasy can ward off.

The Florida Project refuses to avert its eyes from that "other half" of society, the disenfranchised teenaged moms and unschooled youth and half-baked gangstas who receive little but our frustration and condemnation. The movie also refuses to judge them, instead treating them as the valid dramatic subjects they are, neither good nor bad but living makes them such.

Trapped between the big bad world and the folks who can't quite get it together is Bobby, the manager whose efforts to protect Moonee and Halley look a lot like the strangled benediction of Christ's love (in a way, then, this is at least the second time Dafoe has played Jesus). The religious subtext of a depraved and fallen world is amplified by the fact that The Florida Project is the early name of the Walt Disney World Resort.

The film takes this irony and fleshes it out fully, and the results are profound. It's a beautiful and heartbreaking film, a moving parable about the loss of innocence that restores childhood to its proper place in art — not as a cutesy byproduct of adults' wishful thinking, but as a sacred value whose shrinking realm of safety tells us exactly what we've become. DELGANI STRING QUARTET

AMERICAN CLASSICS

Delgani String Quartet highlights a busy weekend in classical music in Eugene

How do you turn a mountain into music? Ask composer Benjamin Krause.

A recent University of Oregon grad, now teaching in Indiana, Krause just wrote a string quartet inspired by views of Oregon's Cascade mountains (Jefferson, the Sisters, lava fields, lonely trees, etc.) from the Dee Wright Observatory. The terrain and the feelings evoked by the Cascades are audible in Krause's music, commissioned and performed by Eugene's Delgani String Quartet this Sunday (Nov. 5) afternoon and Tuesday (Nov. 7) night at United Lutheran Church, 2230 Washington Street.

The rest of the third-season opening concert by Oregon's finest regularly performing chamber ensemble (I've heard just about all of them) contains more music inspired by America: the scampering 1936 quartet by one of the most accessible 20th-century American composers, Alan Hovhaness, who later lived in Seattle for much of his life, and Antonin Dvorak's ever-popular 1893 "American" quartet, one of the masterpieces the Czech composer wrote during his fruitful sojourn in Iowa, and influenced by his American experiences, both musical and more (including a native songbird's call).

Of course, when most of us think of classic American music, we're likely to lean toward pop, and especially the so-called "American Songbook" standards written between 1920 and 1960. That's the territory covered by The Late Set, the alluring new release by Hilary Gardner and Ehud Asherie, who perform at The Shedd this Saturday, Nov. 4. Gardner's glowing voice and Asherie's supple pianism have attracted critical raves over the past decade on New York's cabaret scene. Expect tunes (seldom the most-covered ones) from Rodgers & Hart, Harold Arlen, Irving Berlin and other stalwarts.

That very same night — dueling duos! — brings another chance to hear American Songbook standards in a more-intimate setting, when Seattle jazz singer Greta Matassa and keyboardist Darin Clendenin perform at Broadway House. Email pbodin@uoregon.edu for reservations.

Musicians didn't stop turning pop hits into jazz standards in 1960. On Nov. 5, the Bay Area piano and bass duo Negative Press Project (Andrew Lion and Ruthie Dineen) bring their fascinating tribute to late, great singer/songwriter/guitarist Jeff Buckley to The Jazz Station. That's also where you can hear one of Canada's most acclaimed jazz stars, saxophonist/composer Allison Au's quartet, which plays her sweetly melodic original jazz.

There's some attractive non-American classical music onstage, too. This Saturday's (Nov. 4) Oregon Mozart Players concert at the UO's Beall Concert Hall focuses on French classics, including Saint-Saëns' Romantic Cello Concerto No. 2, starring guest cellist Mark Kosower, principal cellist of the greatest American orchestra, Cleveland's, plus a lovely pair of lyrical late Romantic compositions by Gabriel Faure, Masques et Bergamasques and the familiar Elegie, and Francis Poulenc's breezy, dance-driven 1949 Sinfonietta. ■

EAST L.A. CUMBIA PUNKS

David Pacheco, vocalist and guitarist with Thee Commons, discovered cumbia back in the 1980s, when the style took Los Angeles by storm.

“Cumbia music originated from Colombia,” Pacheco explains, “from areas of less affluence.” The kind of places where, a little like food, you can find world’s best music.

Cumbia is rhythmic and danceable. As it spread around Latin America in the ’50s and ’60s, guitars replaced accordions, and the style melded with rock and surf music. This era also added heavy doses of swinging mid-century kitschy fun to the cumbia sound: a little Ventures, a little Juan Garcia Esquivel and a little Bogota street culture.

“We grew up listening to that music as kids,” Pacheco recalls, referring to his childhood with his brother Rene, who plays drums and percussion in Thee Commons. “That’s how we came about it.”

As can be heard on the band’s latest release, Paleta Sonora, or “sound palette,” Thee Commons put their own twist on tradition. Pacheco says his band’s latest release moves the band even further away from traditional cumbia.

“We started to incorporate as many different genres as possible,” Pacheco says, “from disco music to banghra music to cumbia to straight-up Beatle-ish rock’n’roll.”

Defying expectations is something Thee Commons are used to. Early on, Pacheco says, his band’s decision to play cumbia was met with hesitation. “We did it our own way,” he explains, recalling that friends said, “You need to work at it.”

Thee Commons adopted a punk rock attitude and ignored the naysayers, creating the unique sound they have today: a messy, overheated traffic jam of style and culture that could only come from East L.A.

WRITING THEIR OWN SONNET

New improvisational dance outfit, Tesseract Theatre Company, takes shape

Tesseract Theatre Company is a new star in the constellation of local performing arts, launching into orbit with a series of informal workshops.

"The same way that a choreographer or troupe constructs a dance inspired by a particular piece of music or to express a certain emotion or idea, the Tesseract Theatre Company constructs devised works based on inspiration, to communicate a greater truth," says group co-founder Mia Vance.

In geometry, a tesseract is the four-dimensional analog of a cube. Book nerds know it as a way of wrinkling time, so you can travel without having to go the long way 'round.

And this theatrical Tesseract burns brightly, inviting curiosity and building community.

"In dance, there is more than just the movement and in theatre there are more than just the lines — each uses its tools and techniques to communicate something deeper with its audience," Vance says.

Unlike more traditional venues, Tesseract Theatre Company — founded by Vance, her husband Cullen Vance, Eric Braman, Taylor Freeman and Gypsy Prince — doesn't begin with a script.

"We begin with movement technique. From this technique, characters emerge," Vance says. "We place these characters together, improvisationally, and story emerges."

Via a process that develops story through accessible experimentation, repetition and deep discussion, Tesseract gently moves towards character and plot formation.

"This process is guided not by a director but by what we call a 'butcher,'" Vance says. "The butcher is responsible for cutting away bits of the devised work that do not serve the story as a whole."

Beyond that point, the rehearsal process becomes a little more typical.

"We continue repeating the piece we've developed, exploring and refining what we've created, adding in costumes, props and any other theatrical elements as needed, and voila! A brand new, never-before-seen devised performance is born," Vance says.

Tesseract Theatre Company's model for devising a piece of theatre is rooted in movement at its core. Using the Viewpoints techniques developed by Anne Bogart and Tina Landau, the group explores the emotions, characters and relationships that will become the ingredients for stories and, ultimately, a theatrical performance.

"Tesseract Theatre Company is excited to continue offering free monthly public workshops at Amazon Community Center," Vance says.

(Full disclosure: This writer took one of the workshops last summer, and had a blast.)

"These workshops offer an opportunity for members of the community to become familiar with the shared language of our movement-based improvisation techniques, and to become eligible to participate in future devised performance projects," Vance says.

Catch the next free workshops noon to 1:30 pm Nov. 5 and Dec. 3, at Amazon Community Center; you can find the group on FaceBook, or email them at tesseracttheatre-co@gmail.com. ■

Taxes for the year 2016-2017, in the amount of $1,070.22, plus interest. SUM OWING ON THE OBLIGATION secured by the Deed of Trust: $71,691.06 as principal balance, plus interest thereon at 5% per annum from March 24, 2017 through July 31, 2017, plus interest thereon at 10% per annum from August 1, 2017, until paid, plus $200.00 in late fees, plus $140.00 for insurance. ELECTION TO SELL: The Trustee elects to sell the real property to satisfy the sum owing on the obligation, which the Beneficiary has declared due. THE SALE: DATE: Monday, January 8, 2018 TIME: 10:00 o'clock a.m., Pacific Standard Time as established by ORS 182.110 PLACE: Law Offices of Brian Cox, 142 West 8th Avenue, Eugene, Oregon 97401. The Trustee will sell the real property at oral public auction to the highest bidder for cash or cashier's check drawn on a bank or savings and loan with an Oregon branch, paid on the day of sale, the interest which the Grantor had or had power to convey at the time of execution of the deed of trust, together with any interest of the Grantor or successors in interest acquired after execution of the deed of trust, to satisfy the sum owing on the obligation plus the expenses of sale and trustee and attorney fees. REINSTATEMENT: Any person named in ORS 86.778 has the right to have the foreclosure proceedings dismissed and the deed of trust reinstated by payment of the entire amount due, other than such portion of the principal as would not then be due had no default occurred, together with the costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the terms of the obligation, trustee and attorney fees as prescribed by ORS 86.778, and by curing any other default complained of in the notice of default, at any time prior to five days before the date set for the sale. Without limiting the trustee's disclaimer of representations or warranties, Oregon law requires the trustee to state in this notice that some residential property sold at a trustee's sale may have been used in manufacturing methamphetamines, the chemical components of which are known to be toxic. Prospective purchasers of residential property should be aware of this potential danger before deciding to place a bid for this property at the trustee's sale. DATED: August 1, 2017. Brian D. Cox, Trustee, 142 West 8th Avenue, Eugene, Oregon 97401, (541) 342-5587. Date of first/last publication: November 2, 2017/ November 23, 2017.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): America's Civil War ended in 1865. A veteran from that conflict later produced a daughter, Irene Triplett, who is still alive today and collecting his pension. In the coming months, I foresee you being able to take advantage of a comparable phenomenon, although it may be more metaphorical. Blessings from bygone times, perhaps even from the distant past, will be available to you. But you'll have to be alert and know where to look. So now might be a good time to learn more about your ancestors, ruminate exuberantly about your own history, study the lives of your dead heroes and maybe even tune in to your previous incarnations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): "I wasn't in the market to buy a Day-Glo plastic fish from a street vendor," testified a witty guy named Jef on Facebook, "but that's exactly what I did. The seller said he found it in someone's trash. He wanted fifty cents for it, but I talked him up to a dollar. The best part is the expression on the fish's face. It's from Edvard Munch's The Scream." I bring this testimony to your attention, Taurus, because I feel it's good role-modeling for you. In the coming days, I bet you won't know exactly what you're looking for until you find it. This prize may not be highly valued by anyone else but you. And it will amuse you and be of use to you in just the right ways.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Where are Chinese gooseberries grown? In New Zealand. What is a camel's hair brush made of? Squirrel fur. When England and France waged their Hundred Years' War, how long did it last? 116 years. When do Russians celebrate their October Revolution? In November. Trick answers like these are likely to be a recurring theme for you in the coming weeks, Gemini. That's why I advise you to NOT be a Master of the Obvious.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): In accordance with the astrological omens, I recommend you indulge in any or all of the following exercises. 1. Dedicate an entire day to performing acts of love. 2. Buy yourself flowers, sing yourself a song, and tell yourself a story about why you're so beautiful. 3. Explain your deeply-felt opinion with so much passion and logic that you change the mind of a person who had previously disagreed with you. 4. Make a pilgrimage to a sacred spot you want to be influenced by. 5. Buy a drink for everyone in a bar or cafe.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): "Dear Rob: I saw a photo of you recently, and I realized that you have a scar on your face. I hope you don't mind me telling you it resembles an ancient Mayan hieroglyph that means 'Builder of Bridges for Those Who Are Seeking Home.' Did you know this? If so, do you think it's an accurate title for what you do? - Renegade Leo Scholar." Dear Scholar: Thanks for your observation. I don't know if I fully deserve the title "Builder of Bridges for Those Who Are Seeking Home," but it does describe the role I'm hoping to play for Leos. The coming weeks will be an excellent time for your tribe to clarify and cultivate your notion of home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Author Clarissa Pinkola Estés encourages us to purge any tendencies we might have to think of ourselves as hounded animals, angry, wounded victims, leaky vessels aching to be filled, or broken creatures yearning for rescue. It so happens that now is a perfect time for you to perform this purgation. You have maximum power to revise your self-image so that it resounds with more poise, self-sufficiency and sovereignty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): I used to scoff at people who play the lottery. The chance of winning big is almost nil. Why not invest one's hopes in more pragmatic schemes to generate money? But my opinion softened a bit when the planet Jupiter made a lucky transit to an aspect in my personal horoscope. It really did seem like my chances of winning the lottery were unusually high. I started dreaming about the educational amusements I'd pursue if I got a huge influx of cash. I opened my mind to expansive future possibilities that I had previously been closed to. So even though I didn't actually get a windfall during this favorable financial phase, I was glad I'd entertained the fantasy. In alignment with current astrological omens, Libra, here's the moral of the story for you: Meditate on what educational amusements you'd seek if you had more money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In the early stages of Johnny Cash's development as a musician, his mother hired a coach to give him singing lessons. But after a few meetings, the teacher counseled him to quit. Johnny's style was so unique, the seasoned pro thought it better not to tamper with his natural sound. I hesitate to offer you comparable advice, Scorpio. I'm a big believer in the value of enhancing one's innate talents with training and education. On the other hand, my assessment of your destiny between now and October 2018 impels me to offer a suggestion: It may be useful for you to give some credence to the perspective of Johnny Cash's voice coach. Make sure you guard and revere your distinctiveness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): I used to nurture a grudge against Tony Pastorini. He was the high school math teacher who kicked me out of the extracurricular Calculus Club because my proofs were too "intuitive and unorthodox." The shock of his rejection drove me away from a subject I had been passionate about. Eventually, though, I came to realize what a good deed he had done. It would have been a mistake for me to keep specializing in math — I was destined to study literature and psychology and mythology — but it took Pastorini to correct my course. Now, Sagittarius, I invite you to make a similar shift of attitude. What debt of gratitude do you owe a person you have thought of as a source of frustration or obstruction?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): In the lore of ancient Greek mythology, the god Prometheus stole fire from his fellow deities and sneakily gave it to us humans. Before our patron provided us with this natural treasure, we poor creatures had no access to it. As I gaze out at your possibilities in the coming months, Capricorn, I foresee you having Promethean inclinations. Your ability to bestow blessings and spread benevolence and do good deeds will be at a peak. Unlike Prometheus, however, I don't expect you'll get into trouble for your generosity. Just the opposite!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Here's a parable you may find useful. An armchair explorer is unexpectedly given a chance to embark on an adventure she has only read and dreamed about. But she hesitates on the brink of seizing her opportunity. She asks herself, "Do I really want to risk having ragged reality corrupt the beautiful fantasy I've built up in my mind's eye?" In the end she takes the gamble. She embarks on the adventure. And ragged reality does in fact partially corrupt her beautiful fantasy. But it also brings her unexpected lessons that partially enhance the beautiful fantasy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): "A game of chess is usually a fairy tale of 1001 blunders," said chess grandmaster Savielly Tartakower, a Pisces. "It is a struggle against one's own errors," he added. "The winner of the game is the player who makes the next-to-last mistake." I think this is excellent counsel during the current phase of your astrological cycle, Pisces. It's time to risk bold moves, because even if they're partly or wholly mistaken, they will ultimately put you in a good position to succeed in the long run. Here's a further point for your consideration. Remember the philosopher Rene Descartes' famous dictum, "Cogito ergo sum"? It's Latin for "I think, therefore I am." Tartakower countered this with, "Erro ergo sum," which is "I err, therefore I am."

HOMEWORK: Meditate on death not as the end of physical life, but as a metaphor for shedding what's outworn. In that light, what's the best death you've experienced? Freewillastrology.com

WIGGLY TAILS DOG RESCUE

Helping abandoned and surrendered dogs find their forever homes

Winter 2 year old pit mix weighing in at approx. 70 pounds. She will be available first week of November. A local owner surrendered this girl. Winter is sweet and happy. She is dog friendly and does fine with dog savvy cats. She is working on her basic training and e-collar training. She is house trained and somewhat crate trained. She will whine in the crate for a while but eventually stops. She has skin allergies which she is on medications for and will need a continued special diet to help with the itching. Early meet and greets can be arranged as her only hold up is getting spayed, which is happening this week. If you would like more information send us a private message.

Gonzo is a super outgoing, shoulder-riding Tuxedo, who loves giving hugs and playing with toys. He also fancies the great outdoors, so Gonzo is searching for a family that can provide an enclosed patio for his bird-watching and sight-seeing enjoyment. This great cat will make a great addition to a family with cat guardian experience. Gonzo also has a roommate/bestfriend/snugglemate, Sweet Potato. If you are able to adopt a pair of cats, this special pair would love to spend the rest of their days together!

Flip and Flop are a curious and active bonded pair of brothers. They both enjoy cuddling and don't mind sharing a food bowl. They are looking for a home where they can live indoors and would love the chance to roam around and explore their new digs. They are not too concerned about anyone's level of experience with rabbits, because they know that the staff here are always willing to fill you in on proper care. If you are looking for a couple of soft, cuddly, nose wiggling family members to add to home, Flip and Flop are the ones for you.

SAVAGE LOVE

DEGRADING GAMES

BY DAN SAVAGE

I am a pretty handsome gay (I have been told) and I am dating a gorgeous man. I am 34, and he is 31. I am bottom only, and he is top only — so it's a good match. He seems sincerely interested in me and we are talking about being together. But here is the thing: He noticed that I have a rather small penis. I am under the average, and his dick is quite big and long. Since he discovered this, he fancies about "humiliating" me about my "small pee-pee." He would even like me to show it to his friends. I am not ashamed of the size of my penis because it's how I am made and I can't change it. But I wonder what this idea means for him. I would somehow understand that he would put me down if he suffered from a "small dick complex," but since he is so well-endowed, I don't get it. Is it a common turn-on for some top guys to imagine that their partner is smaller than them? Does it hide something else maybe?

Humiliated Over Tackle

P.S. English is not my mother tongue. I apologize for this.

I don't have a problem with your English — it's doubtless better than my [insert your mother tongue here] — I have a problem with your potential boyfriend.

Small penis humiliation (SPH) is a kink popular enough to have spawned a porn genre. There are more than 76,000 SPH-themed porn videos on XTube — and XTube is just one of the various porn tubes out there ruining everything for everyone. Over at Pornhub, there are SPH videos with more than two million views. That's all anecdote, not data, HOT, but it's anecdote enough to confirm that, yes, small penis humiliation is definitely a thing. And it can be a very good thing for guys whose erotic imaginations transformed their anxieties about having small dicks into a kink they enjoy.

But you are not one of those guys. You like your dick fine, and you've got the exact right attitude about your dick — indeed, all men everywhere, regardless of size, should embrace their dicks the way you've embraced your own. Your dick is your dick, you can't change it, and you shouldn't be ashamed of it. And big or small, HOT, your dick has all the same nerve endings as that big and long thing on the guy who might be your boyfriend someday (but who's definitely a presumptuous asshole right now).

As with most kinks — bondage, cuckolding, foot fetishes, diapers, pup play — subs/bottoms are way more common than Doms/tops. So it's usually the guy with the small dick who initiates small penis humiliation games with his partner, HOT, not the boyfriend with the bigger dick and/or the girlfriend with the pussy and/or the bigger dick. [Some women have dicks, all women can purchase strap-ons.] While there are SPH tops out there — just as there are bondage tops (half of whom are frustrated bondage bottoms) — their numbers are far smaller.

But the issue here isn't stumbling over a rare small penis humiliation top in the wild, HOT, but whether or not you're into it. Are you into power play? Do you like being degraded? Does the thought of this dude ordering you to show your dick to his friends — friends who presumably want to see your dick — turn you on in any way? If the answer is no, no, and FUCK NO, then tell your potential new boyfriend to stop making fun of your cock. If the answer is maybe, maybe, and maybe under the right circumstances, then talk it over with him and work out when, where, and how you're willing to indulge his SPH kink.

If you stay with him, you're also going to need to have a conversation about consent. SPH isn't something you surprise someone with. Like most kinks, it requires advance discussion, the setting of limits, and the consent of both parties. It's worrisome that this guy didn't bother with obtaining your consent in advance, HOT, and if he doesn't recognize that he made a mistake and swear not to make a similar mistake in the future, well, then you'll have to DTMFA.

I'm sorry to be graphic, but it can't be avoided. I'd like to have my fiancé come on my pussy and then have someone else lick it off. My two questions: [1] Does that fall in the realm of safe sex for the extra person involved? [2] How do we find that person? Is there an app to meet a third or how do we find swinger parties in our area? Is that a degrading thing to ask someone to do?

Personally Understands Serious Sexual Yearnings

1. Nope. Various sexually transmitted infections — gonorrhea, syphilis, chlamydia, herpes, HPV, etc. — could be contracted by the extra person and/or passed on to you and your fiancé. There's low to no risk for HIV, PUSSY, but the act nevertheless falls outside the realm of safe sex. Very little actually exists in the realm of purely safe sex. There's always risk, we can mitigate for those risks, we can make sex safer, but save for solo and cyber, sex is rarely ever 100 percent safe.

2. This is technically three questions, PUSSY. You find that person by putting ads on hookup sites and/or by putting yourselves in places where you might meet that person, i.e., pick-up joints, sex parties, swingers clubs. There are lots of apps out there for couples seeking thirds, you can even advertise as a couple seeking a third on big dating sites like OkCupid. It is a degrading thing to ask someone to do — but since there are lots of people out there into erotic degradation, that's a potential selling point.

I am in a relationship with a lovely and amazing man. Everything could be really good, if only his father would stop being a creep. He's constantly telling me how beautiful, smart, and attractive I am. Last year around Christmas, I sang a few songs when we were visiting my boyfriend's family, and his father commented that I have an "erotic" voice. A few days later, I received an e-mail from him. Attached was a poem about my singing, where he called my voice "angelic" and "pure." It made me really uncomfortable and I told him that I don't want to receive poems from him and that he should stop complimenting me all the time. He didn't. When I told him again to stop commenting on my appearance, he responded that I must NOT like myself very much. I talked to my boyfriend's mother, and she said she's "given up" and ignores her husband's behavior. It turns out that he behaved similarly with ex-girlfriends of my boyfriend's brothers. I'm so angry and don't know what to do. My boyfriend supports me, but it's hard to talk about the topic, because it's his father.

Fucking Annoyed That He Engrosses Rightfulness

I'm curious what your boyfriend's "support" looks like, FATHER. Does he tell you privately that his father is a creep and that he wishes his dad would knock this shit off? Or does he tell his father directly that he's being a creep and insist he knock it off? The latter is support, the former is not.

I'm thinking there's a reason your boyfriend's brothers only have ex-girlfriends — you don't speak of any currents, FATHER, a highly revealing detail — and it's not just because their dad is a creep. It's because no one in the family is willing to stand up to this creep. Not his wife, not his children. If your boyfriend refuses to run interference and/or shut his father down, I would advise you to join the list of exes. However "lovely and amazing" your boyfriend might be when you two are alone, if he's useless in the face of his father's sexual harassment, you'll have to DTMFA too.
